Is A Home Warranty Worth The Money It Costs YOU!

When you get to the offer phase of buying a home the question that always comes up is, do you need a home warranty when buying a home? In this video I will be explaining when do i need a home warranty, when is it worth getting a home warranty, when to get a home warranty, How does a home warranty work, What do home warranties generally cover, Who pays for the home warranty, and How much does a home warranty cost. *So what is a home warranty? A home warranty is defined as a one-year service agreement that covers the repair or replacement of many major home system components and appliances that typically break down over time due to normal wear and tear. *What do home warranties generally cover? Home warranty Coverage varies depending on where you live. Items available for coverage typically include central air conditioning systems, central heating systems, kitchen appliances, clothes washer and dryer, plumbing system, electrical system and roof leaks. Many of these items are included in the standard plan of the warranty. On many policies, you can add other components like roof leaks, swimming pool pumps, solar panels, and various other items. please check the appropriate coverage for the home you'll be purchasing so you get the maximum protection for the home you will be buying. *Who pays for the home warranty? When making a purchase offer on a home I generally write in all offers that the seller pays for the home warranty. in some cases like a "bidding war" or a "low-ball offer," some buyer prefer to pay for the home warranty themselves to "sweeten" the deal for the sellers to want to take their offer over the one who asked for the home warranty. *How much does a home warranty cost? Basic coverage starts at about $500 and goes up to $700 for more comprehensive plans, each company has a different structure to the plans so be sure to read over them completely before choosing the right home warranty for your next home. *How does a home warranty work? After you purchase your home you'll get some paperwork sent to you by your real estate professional with the name and contact information of the home warranty company, (this may be emailed to you, as well) the policy with an account number. Most warranties cover you for one year from the date of closing so make sure you keep that date in your calendar so you know when the time is up. When you have an issue with any component of the home that is covered in the home warranty call The provider to fix the problem. If an appliance is malfunctioning and cannot be repaired, depending on contract coverage, the home warranty company will pay to replace and install the appliance. The homeowner then pays a small trade service fee for the visit that typically runs about a $100.00 If you are on the fence about a home warranty and the cost of getting one I like to put it to my buyers like this "It's $500 of peace of mind, for a year". Although $500 may seem like a lot of money, having to repair a broken AC or replace a hot water heater is a lot more expensive. My parents still keep a home warranty on their home even though they are not selling it. They are older and on a fixed income so it pays for them to have the coverage so if anything major happens to their AC, plumbing or hot water heater they won't be facing a large payment to have those things repaired. (You can with many home warranty service providers, extend the date and renew your policy yearly) I hope you found this video about purchasing a home warranty useful, if you'd like to read more real estate buying and selling tips you can visit my blog at yourrealestatewhisperer.com If you'd like to watch more videos specifically about buying a home here is a very useful playlist. bit.ly/2myd6Go If you don't want to miss important tips so you can be a real estate home buying ninja, please consider subscribing bit.ly/2MEztWK To get a copy of my FREE buyers e-book you can download it here: bit.ly/2LdyEqT If you have any questions about buying and selling your home feel free to reach out to me at anytime by email or any respectable time by phone. But if you are purchasing a condominium, is the home warranty policy worth it? First off, what is a home warranty policy? A home warranty protects you from the high cost of unexpected failures to the major systems and appliances in your house or condo by repairing or replacing covered items that break down due to normal wear and tear. Source: onlinehsa.com/homeowners/home-warranty.aspx A home warranty policy usually covers you for the first year after you move-in. How much is a home warranty policy? Policies vary in price. The base price is usually around $450. This will cover some or all of electrical, plumbing, appliances, washer/dryer, hvac, and maybe some other elements of the condominium. Is a home warranty policy worth it for condo buyers? No. Probably not. It's just one year of protection. And in condos, there's not much that can go wrong. If you notice issues with an appliance or system, ask for money on the home inspection. You're probably not going to have a major expense in the first year. You very well could. They usually fall into two categories. The first would be an issue that could have been remedied during the home inspection. Waiving Your Home Inspection WILL Win You Your House youtube.com/watch?v=YKBNYKaQ5sY And the second issue that could come up is an emergency repair. Obviously, these things happen. Is it likely to happen in your first year? Probably not. Could it happen in the

5 years that you live at your condo? Potentially. Still, point being is once you do the home inspection, you should have a good idea of the health of your systems and hedge your bets on whether you think the systems will last or if you should ask for money or replacement of a potential system. Home warranty policies are not worth it for condo buyers. You will probably not see the value of the $450 that you will have to pay upfront during settlement. And if you do pay that amount, you will almost wish for something to break so that you can redeem a new appliance. So you're essentially rooting for your own demise. Not good. If you're in a case where you are not competing against any other offers and you are sensing a desperate seller, you may be able to get the seller to pay for your home warranty. However, as a listing agent, if I see that a contract has been submitted has the home warranty paid for by the seller, it is just one more thing that will make that offer look worse than competing offers. In addition, some title companies may pay for the home warranty themselves. Ask your title company if they are willing to pay for this charge. You may be surprised. Mark Pattison Realtor- The Home Warranty Explained

Home warranty- how much does it cost? Who pays? What does it cover? The Home Warranty Explained

youtube.com/watch?v=tRmk0zV0uDo I always explain that a Home Warranty is just an added insurance. Does it cover everything? No. Is it nice to have? Yes. In Southern California, it is typical for the seller to purchase the warranty for you. The buyer gets to decide which company. My Home Warranty Tips: 1. Make sure you have the correct coverage. Some items buyers miss are pool, AC, or extra roof coverage. 2. Make sure you renew your home warranty every year. You can continue your warranty year over year.
