How Much Should You Put Down on A Home | Down Payment in 2021

Cash vs Finance HERE:youtu.be/cAQI3RH_CKI This video is about deciding how much should you put down on a home. With a number of down payment assistance programs available nowadays and interest rates at a record low, it can be really hard to decide what path to owning a home is the right one for you. Knowing how much should you put down on a home has a huge effect on your home buying plan. There is a big difference between 5 vs 20 down payment. It dictates your mortgage amount as well as your monthly payment to affect exactly how much house you can afford. In this video, we'll walk through key decisions you have to make as a potential home owner, to decide how much money you should put down on a house. This will help you decide on a down payment in 2021. There are some different schools of thought here when it comes to buying a home. I call them title-motivated and cash-flow motivated. You need to decide which one you are, and what your goals are. And this is for both people looking to buy a home to live in, as well as investors. Title Motivated Title motivated means your goal is to really at the end of the day just own the property. You want that title, you want that deed, which means you'll put less down and finance more so you can have the property. That's the idea of house hacking, where you want to begin buying investment properties, but you don't have the cash on hand to put down the 20% traditional down payment. It's also the path for those who want to become a homeowner. Buyers seeking a home to live in can leverage FHA and other down payment assistance programs. This allows them to get a home that they love with putting less down payment. There are some drawbacks to being title motivated. Putting down less money means you finance more, which means a higher monthly payment. By financing more, you're more of a risk to the bank, so they will tack on that extra fee through PMI, which ranges from like 0.25% to 2%. Cashflow Motivated Cashflow motivated means that you want to be pocketing as much money as possible per month. This is important if you're purchasing the property as an investment property. If you're cashflow motivated, you want to put a higher down payment down. Higher down payment means less you have to finance, which means a lower monthly payment. However, if you're putting down at least 20%, it also means you're avoiding extra fees like PMI (private mortgage insurance) that come with putting less down. So as you can see, it's hard to know how much you want to put down until you decide what is driving you. Are you someone who is ready to own a home, whether personal or as an investment, and are willing to deal with a higher payment and more fees? Or are you someone who is willing to buy less house if it means you can save a little money and bring in a higher cash flow each month. As much information as I tell you, I can't make that decision for you! ----- MORE VIDEOS: EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT BUYING RENTALS AS A BEGINNER: youtube.com/playlist?list=PLU19hmY0jYPrGMQiA1Mp3Fi_bq_s0rhMd LEARN ABOUT REAL ESTATE AS A BEGINNER: youtube.com/playlist?list=PLU19hmY0jYPrmCsY7_X8R6GTaEKBvB3B3 Add me on Instagram: instagram.com/aysha_vc/ Add me on TikTok: aysha_vc Great Books to Read if You're Just Starting Off in Real Estate and Rental Properties: New, No Nonsense Landlord - amzn.to/3565eBm All Real Estate is Local - amzn.to/2YEp7ys

Down Payment on a House: How Much Do You Need

Down Payment on a House: How Much Do You Need?

How to Get the Down Payment for a House (and EVERYTHING else you'll need to know)

So how do you save it for a house, How much house can you buy and how do you make sure you get approved. 1. Common Down Payment you Here - 0% money down - 3.5% FHA Loan - 20% down payment Here are the Cons and Pros to each of these - 0% down payment is very unlikely of actually finding a lender because they want you to have skin in the game. But if you do find out it's going to be very high mortgage payments, because you're borrowing 100% of the money - 3.5% FHA (federal, housing, authority) Loan: you do get to put down a very small amount of money, you don't need the best credit score it can be 580. And you can get one for a multi-family unit of up to 4 units. But there will be mortgage insurance premiums, a large monthly payment (you could be looking at somewhere around 2% just in those fees of the entire loan annually) - 20% down payment you and can avoid PMI because you're putting down so much equity, you also get a lower monthly payment. But the big con is that its going to a lot of money to actually save up depending on the house you'll be buying. PMI Calculator: hsh.com/calc-pmi.html PMI: can be affected, by the down payment, loan term, and also your credit score. It ranges from .20% all the way up to 1.5% 2. Qualify Debt to Income Ratio - This is going to tell you if you can actually qualify for the house you want - This way before you go and try to ding your credit, you can use the same formula the bank uses to determine how much house you actually afford - Ps, remember although the bank might give you a big loan, we always want to make sure the mortgage doesn't go over 30% of your after-tax monthly income. So the Bank is Looking for this: - A Debt to Income Ratio of no more than 43% usually - They have the front end and the back end which I will explain - But let's say you're buying a house and it's 400k and you put down 10%; your monthly payments $1799.78 Ps: @Meet Kevin helped me out with this Calculator: mortgagecalculator.org/calcs/debt-ratio.php 3. How to Save up for it - Most likely you have a deadline I want a house by January or something, I hate renting - But in reality, renting is always going to be cheaper - So its best to use the renting period to save for the down payment and not much it Here is how you save for it: - Now if you want to buy a house and you want to put down a 20% down payments, it's not just that you need cash for, you also need closing cost, also emergency fund for the house - Imagine buying a house today and finding out you got laid off because idk a pandemic, its nightmare - The idea is, you have to calculate all the cost and divide it by your deadline and see if it's actually possible and if you can actually afford it For Example: - I want to buy this house, its Florida and it cost around $400,000 - My income is around $60,000 after taxes, and currently, I'm able to save half of my income - Assuming I'm putting down 20% (that going to be $80k) - To save 80k if I'm saving 30k a year is going to take me around 2.6 years - That might be against your plan right, but it makes financial sense. Tip: remember also Closing cost (2-5%) emergency fund (3-6months) FHA Loans Article: businessinsider.com/personal-finance/fha-loans-what-are-the-pros-and-cons * PRO TIP* INFORMATION IS EVERYTHING patreon.com/tommybryson teespring.com/stores/tommybryson ✓2 FREE AUDIOBOOKS✓ amzn.to/2Enayo8 ACORN FREE \$5 Link: acorns.com/invite/38EYSU ✓FREE KINDLE UNLIMITED✓ (traditional reading) Link: amzn.to/2VGbxt9 DISCORD PRIVATE GROUP My Camera Gear: amazon.com/shop/tommybryson ✓ Help Us Reach 250,000 Subscribers: goo.gl/0wvm6w All My Social Media Link: linktr.ee/tommybryson *Some of the links and other products that appear on this video are from companies in which
