Home Inspector Training Advice

Today I'll share my advice on how to become a home inspector. I blogged on this topic back in 2011, and again in 2016, but things change and it's time for another update. I'm writing this because I get a ton of phone calls and emails from people who want to get into the home inspection business. Instead of sharing the first thing that comes into my head during these conversations, I'm putting down all of the most frequently asked questions right here.

Do Home Inspectors Make Mistakes - Home Buying Advice

Visit us at houseinspectionhelp.com/ and homerepair.gregvan.com/ We're human and humans do make mistakes. If you're planning on buying a house in the near future and hiring a home inspector, you can only hope that your home inspector won't make more mistakes than another home inspector. You can always hire another home inspector and spend another $300-$600 or you could use a home inspection checklist. The home inspection checklist usually provide you with enough information to do your own home inspection. Home inspectors also use checklists while they are doing a home inspection for you, so why would you want to use a home inspection checklist and do your own home inspection, just in case your home inspector misses something big. Mistakes like foundation and structural framing problems could be expensive. A home inspector might not find everything and you might not find everything using a home inspection checklist, but if you just found one thing using the checklist that a home inspector missed, how much money would this home inspection checklist actually be worth.

Top 5 Claims Against Home Inspectors

Top 5 Claims Water Damage :: Moisture intrusion (in general). Spot common signs - Some say you have to think like water? Discoloration is common - I would recommend inspectors use thermal cams and moisture meters. Roof :: (connected to water damage - obviously) - roof deterioration - make sure you note improperly installed components - flashing, etc. Take a photo - even if it looks great. There could be sellers who cover things up. With photos - this may give you cover that there wasn't anything visual that alarmed you. Foundation :: Cracks - report ALL cracks. Don't minimize them. Defects are easily covered up. Report cracks. Mold :: Set expectations! - Buyers are easily confused at the time they sign your agreement. This is especially important for inspectors who don't do mold inspections. Often - clients aren't reading the agreement. As an added precaution - place a specific area in your contractor for the client to initial. Plumbing :: misidentified pipe - some clients believe even covered pipe - in walls - should have been inspected - this category also includes waste line and drainage leaks - Today's Home Inspector Podcast is online here: todayshomeinspector.com/inthehouse
