Making large cash deposits and IRS Form 8300

irsmedic.com irs.gov/businesses/small-businesses-self-employed/form-8300-and-reporting-cash-payments-of-over-10000 The Bank Secrecy Act creating filing obligations for (1) foreign bank accounts over $10,000 on an FBAR form or face absolutely insane penalties and perhaps criminal exposure (2) when you come into the US with $10,000 or more in cash you must declare it or face absolutely insane penalties or perhaps criminal exposure and lastly what we are discussing in this video (3) created the requirement that when you deposit $10,000 or more in cash, a bank has to file a Form 8300 with the IRS. Or, if someone suspects you are trying to get around Form 8300, they can file one on you any way. Do you see how this could be a little insane? Form 8300 is required to be filed any time there is a cash deposit over $10,000. But also could potentially be filed when the deposit is under $10,000 when someone's feelings tell them to do so. This means a Form 8300 could be imposed on ANY cash deposit depending on the subjective determination of a bank employee. Do you see how these wildly expansive reporting requirements aside from being mind-blowingly unconstitutional completely undermine any claims that Form 8300 is a legitimate crime fighting tool? Oh yeah, and Form 8300 is required to be filed by many other business besides banks who deal in cash. That's a lot of forms. Let me explain the ridiculousness this way. When you dump useless data into useful data, you just made your useful data - that you worked so hard to get - useless. And it will stay useless until there is a way to segregate the useful from the useless. Which brings us back for Form 8300. Form 8300 is required to be filed so often it doesn't mean anything. Even the US treasury admits to such. The best they can claim is that Form 8300 is used to discover patterns. But this has always seemed to be more a theoretical justification rather than something that has actually been used to find actual criminal conduct. And even think of this $10,000 threshold. It hasn't change since 1970. Yet we know that $10,000 in 1970 is equivalent to around $65,000 today. But Treasury still refuses to admit that inflation exists - and are still fixated on that $10,000 number. So this about it this way. $10,000 today is would be about $1500 in 1970. Do you think congress intended the Bank Secrecy Act to apply to transactions of $1500 in 1970? Now I wasn't alive yet - so I have to rely on the archived Congressional record. And you know — I don't see it there. So here's the bottom line. You are much better off making one huge deposit where you know a Form 8300 will be filed - because Form 8300 will likely never see human eyes, as opposed to trying to avoid the Form 8300 filing requirement by structuring cash deposits in smaller increments, which could trigger a Form 8300 being filed anyway.

Carrying Cash While you Travel: WHAT ARE THE LIMITS

Call us: 416-962-2623 / 1•866•760•2623 (Toll Free in Canada/US) Email Us: info@immigroup.com immigroup.com immigroup.com/news/carrying-cash-you-travel-what-are-limits Many Canadians, at certain stages in life, contemplate living abroad. Maybe you are already doing so. Though it is getting easier and easier to access your money electronically from anywhere in the world, it is still important to know how much cash you can bring with you. This is especially true if you are planning on living in a country which doesn't have the most up-to-date technology, or not enough ATMs. It's also especially true if you fear the consequences of the ceaseless move from paper currency to electronic payments. Either way, you need to know how to bring cash on your travels. This article will tell you: What you have to declare How to Declare What happens if you don't declare Why are these rules in place If you are exiting Canada with more than CAN$10,000 - or if you are returning home with the same amount - then you need to declare it. For the purposes of the Canada Border Services Agency (CBSA), this money must be declared or if it is the form of "monetary instruments." Monetary instruments include: coins; currency; travellers' cheques; 'bearer negotiable instruments' (promissory notes, bills of exchange, treasury bills, bank notes, cheques); 'bearer investment securities' including bank notes, bonds, debentures; stocks; forwards, futures, stock options, swaps; bank drafts money orders and any similar 'instruments'. Electronic transfers of any kind of more than $10,000 are reported by your financial institution to the government of Canada in order to comply with the Proceeds of Crime (Money Laundering) and Terrorist Financing Act, so you only have to worry about reporting the above yourself. Bringing cash and monetary instruments to or from the United States. The United States has the equivalent rule as Canada: currency and monetary instruments being moved into or out of the country valued at more than USD$10,000 must be declared. Since the US and Canadian dollars are rarely the same. Mexico Mexico uses the same standard as the United States: if you are carrying or shipping anything above the equivalent of USD$10,000 you must declare it. Cuba If you are travelling to Cuba for tourism or business purposes, you can bring in up to $2,000 Cuban Pesods, without having to declare it. There are strict rules about bringing money out of Cuba: You cannot take Cuban Convertible Pesos out of Cuba at all, and you can only take out up to $2,000 Cuban Pesos. (However, banks outside of Cuba cannot sell Cuban Pesos so they will not exchange your money.) The United Kingdom You have to declare any cash you are bringing into the UK - on your person or shipping separately - in excess of €10,000. Please note that you cannot use your family members to increase your personal limit; the limit applies to individuals and to families. In the UK, cash means: currency and coins; bankers' drafts; cheques of all types. France The limit is the same across the EU, so the limit for France is the same as the UK: 10,000 euros. However, in France, the limit is tallied per-adult, so you could theoretically bring in more than 10,000 euros undeclared if you are travelling with another adult. (We do not recommend this.) The Dominican Republic You must declare the cash you are bringing into the Dominican Republic, but there is no limit on how much you can bring in. You may be forced to convert a minimum of USD$100 to Dominican Pesos upon arrival, though this rule is rarely enforced. When you are leaving, you can only bring out the same or less than what you declared and brought in, provided it is under USD$10,000. You are not allowed to bring out more than USD$10,000. You cannot import or import or export Dominican Pesos, however, so all money must be in another currency. If you have Dominican Pesos left over and you have failed to convert them prior to departure, you can get about 30% of the value back at the airport before departing. China Upon entering China you must declare any cash in excess of the equivalent of USD$5,000, or 20,000 Yuan, but you can bring in an unlimited amount. You cannot normally bring out more than you brought in, without a permit. Further, if you are bringing out between USD$5,000 and $10,000 you will require a permit. If you are bringing out more than USD$10,000 you will require a special "warrant" from the State Administration of Foreign Exchange. The warrant may cap you at USD$50,000. Italy As with the EU countries above, you must declare any money you are bringing into Italy above 10,000 euros. Germany As with the EU countries above, you must declare any money you are bringing into Germany over 10,000 euros. Bahamas You can bring as much or as little foreign cash with you to the Bahamas and take it out again. However, you are not allowed to exit with more than B$200, as the currency is restricted.

Warren Buffett Reveals How Much CASH You Should Hold

Warren Buffett has a sizable cash position, but how much cash should you hold in your investment portfolio? Buffett controls the cash position of Berkshire Hathaway, and as a result, always has a portion of his portfolio sitting in cash. But, as a smaller investor - his advise is different. You've probably heard the saying, Cash is King, so this is a very important video for all investors in the stock market, especially with a possible 2020 recession upcoming. I get asked time and time again - how much cash should you hold in your investment account? I personally like to hold around 20% of my portfolio value in cash, however I thought it would be good for you to hear this answer from Warren Buffett himself - the greatest investor of all time.
