MOBILE HOME RENOVATION - WHY BUBBLE FOIL INSULATION IS IMPORTANT

MOBILE HOME RENOVATION - WHY BUBBLE FOIL INSULATION IS IMPORTANT. When you heat with fuels like Kerosene and Propane moisture is created and a lot of it. Without a barrier between the metal of a mobile home and the insulation. All that moisture that builds upon the inside of the metal will wick into the wall insulation. Making a good place for mold to grow and eventually causing the wall studs to rot. Some fuels can produce up to 2 cubic feet of water vapor for every cubic foot of gas burned while propane produces 4 cubic feet of vapor for every cubic foot. Intro to Mobile Home Insulation

To launch our series on mobile homes, WxTV has gone to North Dakota to speak with Cal Steiner, one of the nation's most well-known mobile home trainers. He gives us some general guidance on weatherizing a mobile home, with special emphasis on techniques for insulating these units.

Mobile Home Series: Insulating the Walls

This is the last installment of our Mobile Home Series on insulation. This episode focuses on insulating the walls of a mobile home. Ken and his crew will demonstrate the technique of bat stuffing those walls as well as blowing-in hard to reach spots. For a Hi-Res version of this video, please visit: weatherization.org/wxtv13

Spray foam insulation Vs Mobile home

Spray foam is a chemical product created by two materials, isocyanate and polyol resin, which react when mixed with each other and expand up to 30-60 times its liquid volume after it is sprayed in place. This expansion makes it useful as a specialty packing material which forms to the shape of the product being packaged and produces a high thermal insulating value with virtually no air infiltration.

Mobile Home Series: Insulating Attics From the Interior

This installment covers another technique for insulating a mobile home attic. Brian and his crew in Devils Lake, North Dakota show us blowing insulation from the interior. For a Hi-Res version of this video, please visit: weatherization.org/wxtv10
