Why The 'Spider-Man: Far From Home' Illusion Battle Took Nine Months To Make | Movies Insider

One of the stand-out animated sequences of the summer was the illusion battle in Marvel and Sony's "Spider-Man: Far From Home." This sequence took 120 animators at London-based Framestore up to nine months to make. It wouldn't have been possible without influence from "Harry Potter," "The Matrix," or even "James Bond." Visual Effects Supervisor Alexis Wajsbrot, who previously worked on "Thor: Ragnarok" and "Dr Strange" explains to us how it was created. ### Spider-Man: Far From Home Broke My Heart

Spider-Man: Far From Home is a film that HiTop Films did not like. This is the last video HiTop Films will do on MCU Spider-Man. This is the sequel to the "hit" video Spider-Man: Homecoming is a Bad SPIDER-MAN Movie. The next episode of Sam Raimi's Spider-Man will be out this month. HiTop Films will be done talking about Spider-Man and making Spider-Man Video Essays (?) as soon as HiTop Films finishes the Raimi Series. I hope you enjoyed Far From Home more than I did, I really do. #SpiderMan #HiTopFilms #FarFromHome SUPPORT US ON PATREON discord.gg/V94ykwn Business Inquiries: hitopfilms@gmail.com
