The home warranty industry was founded in 1971 by American Home Shield.[1] In the strictest legal sense a warranty of any kind within the United States must adhere to guidelines set at the states' and federal government's levels. However, the words "home warranty" are not always used explicitly to mean a legal warranty is being conveyed. In many cases, at least in the United States, a home warranty is not a warranty at all, but rather a home service contract that covers the repair and/or replacement costs of home appliances, major systems such as heating and cooling, and possibly other components of a home, structural or otherwise. The home service contract generally covers home systems such as the home's plumbing or electrical, and appliances like dishwashers that fail from old age/normal wear and tear. Coverage varies significantly across home warranty companies. Home warranty contracts do not cover all home repairs.

A home warranty is typically a one-year renewable service agreement that is designed to protect you from unexpected, costly repairs on home systems and appliances by covering the repair or replacement of those items. ... Basic plans typically include coverage for: kitchen appliances, water heaters, plumbing, electrical, heating systems, etc..... What does a home warranty cover - While there are different home warranty plans that you can purchase and additional items that you can add on to the basic coverage your typical home warranty plan covers the following: kitchen appliances, water heaters, plumbing, electrical, heating systems, etc..... Some of the additions that can be added on to the basic home warranty plan is Air Conditioning, Roof Coverage, Pool or Spa Equipment, Well Pump and Septic System as well as additional items. How does a home warranty work - One thing to keep in mind when using your home warranty is that you have to file a claim with the home warranty company. That means that you will need to call them and pay the service fee (around $75) to have one of their preferred vendors come out and analyze the problem. From there, the vendor can tell you if it's something that needs to be repaired or replaced and if it's covered by the home warranty. Most of the time, you are not allowed to use your own vendors to do the work. Also, keep in mind that each issue in the house requires you to pay the service fee for each "issue". What is a seller home warranty - This is coverage that protects home sellers while their home is listed on the market. This coverage will help protect the home sellers with coverage on air conditioning, heating, ductwork, plumbing, electrical systems, water heaters and more. Best of all, no plan payment is due until the home closes. Are home warranties worth the cost? Depending on the age of your home and the major systems of the house, I would say yes. The older your water heater, furnace, etc... are the more of a reason to have a home warranty as it could end up paying for itself if any of those items need to be replaced. For newer homes, they aren't as important but could still be a good protection plan against big ticket items. Do you have additional questions about Home Warranties? Is A Home Warranty Worth The Money It Costs YOU!

When you get to the offer phase of buying a home the question that always comes up is, do you need a home warranty when buying a home? In this video I will be explaining when do i need a home warranty, when is it worth getting a home warranty, when to get a home warranty, How does a home warranty work, What do home warranties generally cover, Who pays for the home warranty, and How much does a home warranty cost. *So what is a home warranty? A home warranty is defined as a one-year service agreement that covers the repair or replacement of many major home system components and appliances that typically break down over time due to normal wear and tear. *What do home warranties generally cover? Home warranty Coverage varies depending on where you live. Items available for coverage typically include central air conditioning systems, central heating systems, kitchen appliances, clothes washer and dryer, plumbing system, electrical system and roof leaks. Many of these items are included in the standard plan of the warranty. On many policies, you can add other components like roof leaks, swimming pool pumps, solar panels, and various other items. please check the appropriate coverage for the home you'll be purchasing so you get the maximum protection for the home you will buying. *Who pays for the home warranty? When making a purchase offer on a home I generally write in all offers that the seller pays for the home warranty. in some cases like a "bidding war" or a "low-ball offer," some buyer prefer to pay for the home warranty themselves to "sweeten" the deal for the sellers to want to take their offer over the one who asked for the home warranty. *How much does a home warranty cost? Basic coverage starts at about $500 and goes up to $700 for more comprehensive plans, each company has a different structure to the plans so be sure to read over them completely before choosing the right home warranty for your next home. *How does a home warranty work? After you purchase your home you'll get some paperwork sent to you by your real estate professional with the name and contact information of the home warranty company, (this may be emailed to you, as well) the policy with an account number. Most warranties cover you for one year from the date of closing so make sure you keep that date in your calendar so you know when the time is up. When you have an issue with any component of the home that is covered in the home warranty

call The provider to fix the problem. If an appliance is malfunctioning and cannot be repaired, depending on contract coverage, the home warranty company will pay to replace and install the appliance. The homeowner then pays a small trade service fee for the visit that typically runs about a $100.00 If you are on the fence about a home warranty and the cost of getting one I like to put it to my buyers like this "It's $500 of peace of mind, for a year". Although $500 may seem like a lot of money, having to repair a broken AC or replace a hot water heater is a lot more expensive. My parents still keep a home warranty on their home even though they are not selling it. They are older and on a fixed income so it pays for them to have the coverage so if anything major happens to their AC, plumbing or hot water heater they won't be facing a large payment to have those things repaired. (You can with many home warranty service providers, extend the date and renew your policy yearly) I hope you found this video about purchasing a home warranty useful, if you'd like to read more real estate buying and selling tips you can visit my blog at yourrealestatewhisperer.com If you'd like to watch more videos specifically about buying a home here is a very useful playlist. bit.ly/2myd6Go If you don't want to miss important tips so you can be a real estate home buying ninja, please consider subscribing bit.ly/2MEztWK To get a copy of my FREE buyers e-book you can download it here: bit.ly/2LDyEqT If you have any questions about buying and selling your home feel free to reach out to me at anytime by email or any respectable time by phone. What Home Warranty Companies don't want you to know... revealed by Rupco Plumbing

In this video, Tom & Jim from RupCoe Plumbing, Heating & A/C Company will share with you some of the Dirty Little Secrets that Home Warranty Companies Do Not Want You To Know About... Buying a home is a huge investment and maintaining it is equally taxing. Appliance breakdown or plumbing issues not only burn a hole in your pocket but also create a lot of stress. To remedy that, many of us in NJ and throughout the country rely on House warranties to be the tool that can make our lives hassle free for the duration of the policy, also something wasn't covered that the customer assumed was covered, and lastly, although the item was "covered" there was still a service call fee that the customer didn't expect. Let's talk about them A great selling point when selling a or buying a house is if it insured. Most of home warranty covers only the basic part of the insurance without providing services for the crucial appliances in your house. A coverage plan may be purchased when a house is bought/sold or by the owner who is currently residing in it. When buying a pre-existing house, buyers can choose to purchase a home warranty. Even if you own an older house with aging systems, you are covered with warranty protection. What is covered? The water heater would have to leak or not make any hot water for it to have been covered. Malfunctioning electrical systems, broken washing machines, and the like will promptly disrupt your daily routine. Even the most well-designed units will malfunction or break down eventually. Spas and pools are typically not included unless specifically requested. Think about it, Choose wisely. Each claims maybe handled differently by varying companies but be sure when you choose your HW providers, seek advice first from your friends, or most importantly, from the experts.
