Do Solar Panels Increase the Value of my House

I've had numerous clients ask in recent months if installing solar panels will increase the value of their home. They've been pitched by solar panel sales or financing people, trying to sell them on solar panels. While they can be a good idea for some, check out this video to learn why they are often not a good idea for many.

Does solar increase a home's value

There's three ways to value a house: 1) Assessed value - the value a local government places on your house for tax purposes, 2) appraised value - the value a bank assigns to a home, and 3) market value - the value a buyer assigns to a home. Sometimes these three values align, other times they do not. For the purpose of this video I am focusing on market value since I have access to Colorado data as a Denver real estate agent. It's helpful to know that Colorado gets a lot of sunshine. Depending on who you talk to, there's somewhere around 300 days of sunshine in the Denver area. The question I hope to address is how much market value does solar provide to a home, if any at all? Disclaimer: It's important to note that not all real estate markets are the same. The benefit of solar can vary from region to region and this video should only be used as one example. If you need a recommendation for a trusted agent in your area who understands solar please let me know and I'd be happy to make an introduction. In order to determine if solar provides any market value lift I will add some controls, so I'll break the analysis into three categories: 1) $1m+, 2) $500K-$999K, and 3) $499K-. I'll do this again by taking the median above ground square footage and using this as my baseline for each price range. I'm also only looking at detached single family homes. If you have solar: $499K-: Sold price: $20,500K or 5.4% more CDOM: 12 days slower $500K-$999K: Sold price: $115,500 or 22.21% more CDOM: 2 days quicker $1m+: Sold price: $565,000 or 43.30% more CDOM: 17 days faster It's hard to attribute these numbers directly to solar because it does not account for things like finishes of the interior and neighborhood - two factors that buyers typically prioritize. However, it is a really good indicator that solar does not reduce value of a home. There is one other important factor to consider, and that is how much solar off-sets your electricity bill. How much it reduces your bill depends on how large your solar panel system is, and probably more importantly, how much electricity you consume on a monthly and annual basis. If you own an EV, off-setting your electricity cost could be very important to you from a monetary perspective. Every dollar you're not paying in electricity means a dollar you're not spending powering your vehicle. Let me state this another way to underscore my point: If there was a way you could own a vehicle and never have to pay for fuel again or oil changes again, would you do it? How much money do you spend on a monthly basis to power your gas powered vehicle? This can have a monetary impact as well if you own solar and an EV. Four things to keep in mind: If you have financed or leased your solar this could work to your disadvantage when you go to sell it. If you intend on transferring the remaining balance on the solar to the buyer, this could impact your pool of buyers as some may not want to assume that loan balance or lease timeline and If a buyer's debt to income ratio is really high and they are financing the majority of the purchase of the house, the added monthly payment for the solar may push the buyers above an allowable DTI from their lender if you can pay off the loan either before you put the house on the market or by closing, this will give you a far greater pool of buyers, and finally make sure your listing agent knows how to market a property with solar. I see too many homes with solar that do not have aerial photos of the roof and don't know how to quantify the monetary savings of solar in a listing description. I hope you found this video helpful. Solar Panels For Home - 9 Months Later Review

Solar panels for home - 9 months later! It's the video many of you have been asking for. Ever since I published the video about my solar panel system on my home earlier in the year, and my experience with the installation and energy production I've been seeing, I've been asked for an update on how it's going. By a lot of people. Well, it's time. How much energy production have I been seeing? How much money have I spent on versus how much I've saved? I'm going to cover it all. Do Solar Panels Add Value to a Home Appraisal Tips

Welcome to the SoCal Appraisal Vlog. I created this to help homeowners, first home buyers, real estate agents, investors and attorneys make informed real estate decisions. This weeks topic is all about solar energy, adding solar panels to your home and whether they add value to your property. There are a lot of benefits to solar energy, and it's a nice thought to produce your own power without relying on the grid. Like any major home improvement project, though, it's important to think long-term before making a large financial investment in your home. Do solar panels increase your property value and increase the value on a home appraisal? Watch my video to find out our thoughts on this topic as well as some important tips when installing your panels. GA Appraisals, Inc appraises Residential Real Estate in Pasadena, CA and the entire San Gabriel Valley including South Pasadena, Alhambra, Monrovia, Arcadia, San Marino, Altadena, Temple City, San Gabriel, Rosemead, El Monte, Duarte, Azusa, Glendora, Baldwin Park, Covina, West Covina, San Dimas and La Verne. Did you know appraisers are NOT all the same when it comes to experience, skill sets and education? In fact, they're NOT even close! Simply hiring the cheapest appraiser to save a few bucks could potentially cost you thousands with an incorrect valuation! We know it can be overwhelming when deciding on which appraiser to work with. You're not alone and we're here to help! Glen Kangas has been appraising in Southern CA for over 27 years and is an expert in Estate, Date of Death, Divorce, Expert Witness, REO and Lender appraisals as well as Tenant In Common, Cooperative, As Repaired Value (ARV), Solar and Green Valuations. Are Solar Panels a Good Investment Does Solar Increase Your Home Value - StellarQuest Real Estate

Solar panels can be a great way to reduce your monthly electric bill. Some types of solar are a great investment that can increase the value of your home. Other types of solar agreements may save you money, but they might make your home more difficult to sell if you decide to move. In this video we discuss the difference between owned solar and leased solar. If you're thinking about putting solar on your home it is extremely important to do your research and analysis. Solar salespeople might tell you that solar will instantly increase the value of your home, but this might not always be the case. If you're thinking about buying or selling a home in Orange County or Southern California please feel free to call, text, or email me. My contact information is below.
