Issues with manufactured home installations could put homeowners at risk during hurricanes season

Nearly one out of 10 people in Florida live in a mobile or manufactured home, and because Florida is prone to hurricanes, tornadoes and other severe weather the state has some of the nation's most stringent safety and installation standards.

Mobile Home Hurricane Preparedness

The sustained power of a tropical storm or hurricane can damage or destroy a mobile home in minutes. That's why it's important for these residents to pay close attention to weather warnings, and prepare well in advance of evacuations being ordered. Hillsborough County has launched an initiative to spread that message to residents of more than 60,000 mobile homes in unincorporated Hillsborough County and the cities of Tampa, Plant City, and Temple Terrace. It's timely advice, with National Preparedness Month in September, and the approaching one-year anniversary of Hurricane Irma's memorable sweep through Florida. Through November, staff from Hillsborough County Fire Rescue/Office of Emergency Management, Code Enforcement, and Community Emergency Response Team volunteers from the University of South Florida and South County are visiting the managers of more than 500 manufactured housing communities and recreational vehicle parks. They'll bring an all-hazards alert weather radio for each community's office, and emergency preparedness and safety information in both English and Spanish for residents and visitors. On the morning of Thursday, Aug. 30, they'll deliver a radio and the information to the manager of the Fountainview Estates community in the Town 'N Country area, then stay to talk with residents and offer emergency safety tips. Emergency officials caution residents and visitors not to ride out a tropical storm or hurricane in a mobile home. Despite stronger land development codes and industry improvements, manufactured homes and RVs generally cannot withstand the same wind speeds as other structures without sustaining damage, creating perilous and sometimes deadly conditions for occupants. In addition, there are many older mobile homes in Hillsborough County that were built and put in place before standards were strengthened. That's why, no matter where the mobile home is located in Hillsborough County, all mobile homes are included in Evacuation Zone A. ### American Modern Insurance Manufactured Home Testing

American Modern Insurance Group sponsored unique research done by the Insurance Institute for Business & Home Safety (IBHS), which focused on structures that are often attached to manufactured homes. The research evaluated the effect of high winds, such as those experienced during hurricanes, low-level tornadoes, and severe thunderstorms. While this research focused on wind performance of carports, test results also are applicable to other attached structures, such as porches, awnings, and canopies. The test results also are applicable to both factory-built manufactured homes and traditional site-built homes.

Mobile Home Hurricane Tie Down Straps to Secure Frame , Roof Anchor

Mobile homes and manufactured homes that are in high wind areas need to be strapped down. Even new construction homes require 'hurricane' straps to secure roof trusses and other construction appendages. Usually mobile homes are strapped from the metal frame underneath to the earth to keep them stable in high winds. The straps can connect to 'earth anchors' that are long rods with plate like screws that thread into the ground (about 5' deep) and keep the building from blowing away. Footings and cement are also used to secure a hurricane strap. What I learned on 2 mobile homes I'm working on here is Florida is that they had 'roof over' straps built into the structure. Not all do, and in my case they were cut off below the siding and only the frame straps below the structure were used. My guess is that they are a little 'unsightly' and weren't deemed necessary. With hurricanes seemingly stronger, or there are more mobile homes and hence more damage count, I was happy to use the external straps and the frame straps to better secure my 'tin house'. Like me, you will need a professional to determine if your building has 'roof over' straps or remove the first 3' of siding and see if the straps are hiding there. Once done you may have an easier job of securing wind insurance for your building. Hi! I'm Blair Gilbert, aka MR. HARDWARE.
